

February Diary

Nothing happened February was one of those months when nothing much happened, and when what did happen was in news zones of zero interest to me.

For a guy whose first daily encounter with the news is the morning delivery of his paper-edition New York Post, the three names dominating the month were Whitney Houston (died), Timothy Dolan (made a cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church), and Jeremy Lin (helped his basketball team to an unexpected string of victories).

Keep reading this post . . .