The Sovereignty Caucus. Did you know that the U.S. House of Representatives has a Sovereignty Caucus?

Well, has or had. Just Googling around, the Sovereignty Caucus seems to have quiesced. It was formed two years ago in reaction to the administration's nomination of Harold Koh as legal adviser to the State Department. Koh is keen to extend the authority of trans-national outfits such as the International Criminal Court over U.S. domestic policy and jurisprudence.
